HELP FOR GIVING WORTHLESS CHECK
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Wilmington, N. C., August 11.—After a rather sensational trial, Angus McNeill, who several months ago became prominent in Wilmington's business community as president of the Wilmington Handle Company, was bound over to the higher court to answer the charge of giving a worthless check to the Seashore Hotel, at Wrightsville Beach. He is alleged to have given a check for over $300 signed by the secretary of the handle company, in payment for board for himself and wife. He dated the check several days ahead and asked that it be held until then. This was done, but when the check was presented the company had changed secretaries, and the bank would not honor it. McNeill fought, his counsel claiming there was no intent to defraud, the State and the Hotel Men's Association, represented by counsel, contending otherwise. The court to-day held McNeill guilty, and bound him over to the higher tribunal under heavy bond.
